

Table with multiple columns containing company names, stock codes, dates, and financial data. The table is organized into several vertical sections, likely representing different categories of companies or financial metrics. Each row contains detailed information for a specific company, including its name in Chinese and English, a unique identifier, and various numerical values.