

Table with multiple columns containing financial data, company names, and codes. The table is organized into several vertical sections, likely representing different categories of companies or financial metrics. Each row contains a small number of data points, including what appears to be a company name, a code, and several numerical values.